This program invites intellectual property attorneys and federal judiciary from the Northern and Eastern Districts of Texas to come together for an evening of informal conversation.

Featuring opening remarks by Congressman Ralph Hall, keynote address by NASA astronaut Col. Loren Shriver (USAF, Ret) and dinner at the historic Belo Mansion in downtown Dallas, this event is not to be missed. Proceeds from ticket sales and table sponsorships benefit the science and technology educational initiatives of the Infinity Project.

The Infinity Project is an innovative educational initiative, pioneered by SMU and Texas Instruments, that provides high school students with opportunities to participate in advanced science and technological curricula.

The Infinity Project gathers the funds to train teachers, acquire laboratory resources and implement programs in participating schools in the hopes that juniors and seniors will become engaged in scientific study. To date, Infinity Project modules have been replicated in 19 states across the U.S., reaching thousands of future scientists and engineers.
